Products for attractive, safe and well-maintained behavioral health interiors.
People may believe that hospitals and behavioral health facilities can be built with the same products, but C/S knows this isn’t true. Detachable material and potential ligature points, often overlooked in the general hospital environment, could be used by psychiatric patients to harm themselves or others.

In order to protect residents and staff in high-risk areas, products need to withstand heavy use and possible misuse for an extended amount of time. This material longevity results in a decrease in maintenance costs and an increase of useable space.

Acrovyn® 4000, a durable compound free of PVC and PBTs, offers interior wall and door protection solutions to meet the unique needs of behavioral health facilities. Available in a variety of soft hues and simulated woodgrain patterns, C/S Acrovyn helps create a soothing, healing environment.

Interior Door Protection Products for Patient Safety

Barrier-resistant doors feature a smaller, more compact wicket door contained within the main door to prevent patients from barricading themselves in a room (for openings up to 4’x8’).

Ligature-resistant doors have a radiused top rail that doesn't span the entire opening and feature a flush pull handle and a brush gasket for privacy (continuous hinge recommended; not included).
“I have been an architect for over 40 years and have used C/S products extensively for a long time.”
